- Developing future leaders of the game industry through education inAI and VR/AR technologies, combined with game company internships and entrepreneurship training.

Introduction of a New Admission Unit for 2027 International Student Admission

School of Integrative Engineering | Nano Materials Engineering | Biomedical Engineering

The School of Integrative Engineering fosters leaders who will shape the future of convergence science and technology.

Nano Materials Engineering

Students learn nano-materials technologies at the core of the semiconductor, display, energy industries, and develop into professionals who will lead future advanced industries.

· The program cultivates specialists through foundational coursework and practical training designed for immediate adaptation to companies and research institutes.
· Career paths include semiconductor and display companies, advanced materials and energy industries, research institutes and graduate schools in Korea or abroad.

Biomedical Engineering

By integrating life sciences and engineering, the program cultivates specialists who will lead the fields of medical devices, biomaterials, and digital healthcare.

· By building knowledge in the biological and medical fields on a foundation of engineering, the program cultivates highly qualified professionals who can pursue careers not only in traditional engineering fields but also in the pharmaceutical and healthcare industries.
· Career paths include bio/pharmaceutical companies, medical device and healthcare industries, hospitals, research institutes, and graduate schools.
